Congress Admits FSLIC Is Bankrupt

In the first issue of The Nationalist (Dec85) we reported that 42% of of federally insured Savings & Loans were insolvent and that the Federal Home Loan Bank Board (the parent of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.) did not have the money to close them all down. For three years the Bank Board and the FSLIC hid the crisis by negotiating secret agreements with healthy S&Ls to takeover insolvent S&Ls. The deals were kept secret from the public and from Congress (including its banking committees) because the FSLIC was committing to give the healthy S&Ls billions of dollars to go through with the deals. But the FSLIC did not and does not have the billions that it promised to give and that must be paid to the healthy S&Ls over the coming years. Moreover, it has refused to give copies of the agreements to Congress so that the ultimate costs to the governement can be established according to a recent report by the General Accounting Office. The GAO is Congress's investigating and auditing arm. House Banking Committee member Jim Leach (R-Iowa) has called the FSLIC agreements a "constitutional cataclysm" of uncontrolled spending.

Yet, instead of repudiating the agreements that commit the Congress to future spending and which the FSLIC had no authority to negotiate, leading banking committee members are now calling on the government to come up with the money to bail out the industry. The GAO said there is no way to avoid making taxpayers pay for a bailout. Congressional auditors say the FSLIC is now paying out $2 for every $1 it takes in from healthy S&Ls. The chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, William Proxmire asked Congress for $20 billion in taxpayers funds to save the S&L system. But Congressional estimates range from $50 to $100 billion in total costs making it the biggest bailout in history - bigger than the Chrysler, Lockheed and New York City bailouts combined.

WELFARE FOR THE RICH

Massive S&L failures have wiped out the funds of the FSLIC. These failures have been attributed to deregualtion, lax government supervision, widespread fraud and the collapse of oil prices. When an ordinary man falls into financial difficulty who is there to save him? The capitalists and their media tell us that he is probably a bum who deserves bankruptcy. But when the rich get into trouble, the System tells us that ordinary taxpayers must reach into their pockets to save the masters of fraud and legal embezzlement from their fate. Nearly half of all S&Ls are insolvent. Will half of all S&L executive officers lose their palatial estates, their limosines, their sportscars, their yachts, their private airplanes, their vacation homes? Not in your life! Capitalism is a system of welfare for the rich. The capitalists will have their Congressional puppets spend tens of billions, or hundreds of billions if necessary, to save themselves from the sacrifice that social justice demands. The richest people in the world live in New York City, and that is exactly why the middle class of the rest of the country had to pay the city's debts. It is not accident that the largest corporations in the U.S. pay no tax. That is what capitalism is all about. When things are going well you pay their taxes for them, and when things are going poorly you pay more.

There is of course an ultimate end to exploitation. Once an orange is squeezed of all its juice, no law can get more out of it. Right now the national debt is over $2.5 trillion. More than 25% of every dollar in taxes now goes to paying off the national debt. Yet the debt grows and grows. Soon 40% of every dollar will go into paying the debt, and then 50 %, and then 60% - and then? What will the middle class do when it no longer has anything to give? Maybe then our people will be ready to give the capitalists what they deserve. GG

History Lights the Path of Revolution

A review of 20th Century revolutionary history will throw light on how we should handle our own internal organization and on the question of alliances with other racialist organizations.

THE WAY OF THE BOLSHEVIKS

The marxist Russian Social Democratic Labor Party was divided into two wings: the Bolsheviks (meaning majority), and the Mensheviks (meaning minority). Vladimir Lenin led the Bolsheviks and Georgi Plekhanov led the Mensheviks. Despite the names, the Bolshevik faction was tiny compared to the Menshevik faction. The Bolsheviks got their name by packing international party congresses with their delegates. Lenin was always able to get more delegates to these conventions because he was being subsidized by Josef Stalin's "expropriations" in Georgia and the Caucasus. In other words, Stalin was robbing banks and was sending the money to Lenin who was in exile in Switzerland. Every congress of the RSDLP was rocked by bitter debate over the propriety and effects of these expropriations, but since Lenin always had the majority of delegates he could fend off the criticism. But he could never gain the allegiance or working cooperation of the Mensheviks because of his leadership style.

The Bolsheviks and Mensheviks operated very differently. The Menshevik faction was run by committee with Plekhanov being the first among equals. The Bolshevik faction was ostensibly run by a committee, but Lenin completely dominated it through the sheer force of his personality and intellect. Lenin would never force his fellow committee members, Kamenev and Zinoviev, to adopt his ideology or approach, but rather he would cajole them endlessly until their will was broken. Eventually, it got to the point where they would give in almost automatically rather than go through the grueling process, and so Lenin's authority became unquestioned.

Bolshevik ideology and policy thus reflected the view of one man, and so was much more coherent than Menshevik policy, if such could be said to exist. The problem for the Menshevik leadership was keeping all of the various factions within it happy. This was done through ambiguity and compromise. No one really new what the Mensheviks stood for from moment to moment. Yes, they were marxist revolutionaries, but what did this mean? How would they take power, and more importantly, what would they do with power when they got it?

The fact of being a large marxist revolutionary party was enough to get the Mensheviks into power in March of 1917 as the people were absolutely fed up with Czarist rule. But once in power all of the contradictions within Menshevism rose to the surface. There was no agreement as to what was to be done. Constant haggling led to compromise solutions that were executed with equal half-heartedness and which were inevitably ineffective. Sick over the state of things many Mensheviks, including Trotsky, defected to the rigidly disciplined Bolsheviks. Lenin always claimed to know what do to, even as he was changing his mind, and he always demanded absolute obedience from his subordinates. This iron discipline which had kept the Bolsheviks small before the revolution, now appeared to be the strength of greatness to many Mensheviks disheartened by their own unending internal conflicts. By November 1917, Lenin had won over the majority of the delegates in the revolutionary parliament and seized power from the Menshevik Kerensky government, never to relinquish it. The Bolshevik faction of the Russian Social Democratic Labor Party became the Communist Party.

THE LONG MARCH

In the late 1920's the Communist Party of China was run by a committee under the watchful eye of advisors from the Soviet Union. The two leading lights in this committee were Liu Shao-Ch'i and Mao Tse-tung. Liu and Mao had fundamental differences on how the revolution should be fought. Liu believed in traditional Marxism which maintained that revolution had to be based on the urban proletariet. Mao felt that this analysis could not apply to China at its present level of development, and he urged that the Party concentrate its resources on wooing the peasantry which was more disaffected than the working class. Stalin backed Liu, and the Chinese Politburo ordered an urban uprising for 1927.

At this point Mao was completely disenchanted both with his Chinese comrades on the Politburo and with the Soviets. But he felt he could not afford to break with either as his organization in the countryside was not yet strong enough. Nevertheless, he was not about to sacrifice his cadre in a venture he thought quite mad. He was caught on the horns of a dilemma.

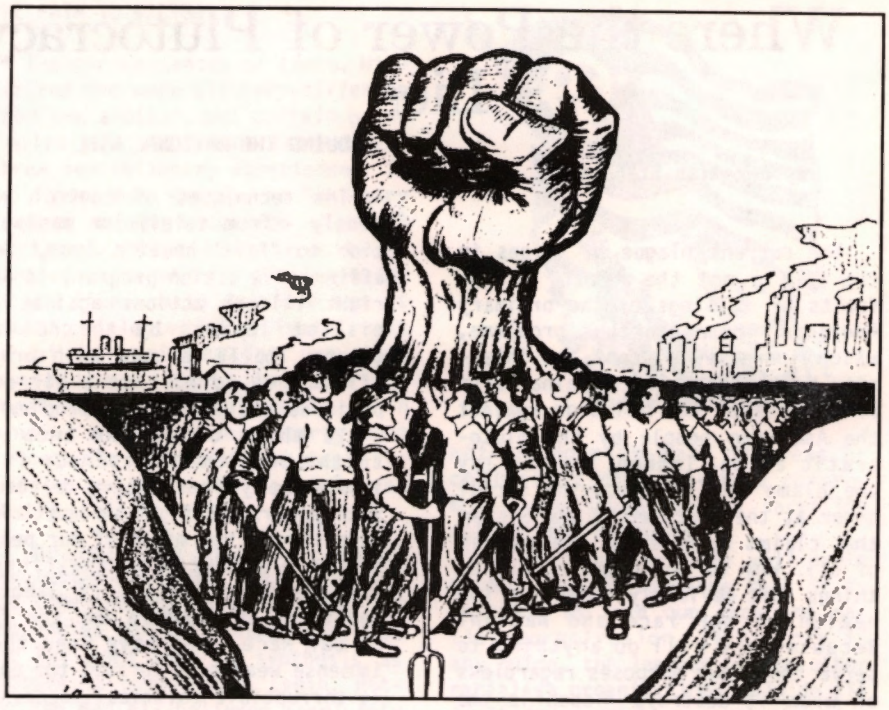
Gary Gallo, Editor

Mao resolved his problem by feigning acceptance of the Politburo decision. But he withheld his fighters from the urban revolt which turned out as disastrously as he had predicted. Liu blamed Mao for not committing to the effort, but the criticism fell on deaf ears as it had become obvious that Mao's analysis was correct. This was not the only time that Mao would acquiesce to a policy he knew would fail. And each failure on the part of his opponents worked to strengthen his hand. Mao never came out openly against committee rule until after the Long March of 1934-35.

The Red Army lost 95% of its strength during the 2000 mile Long March and received nothing but criticism from the Soviet Union. Yet it was able to successfully reestablish itself in the caves of Yenan. Mao was finished with committees. His authority was now unquestioned and it would remain so until he was a very old man.

If someone did not agree with Mao's approach, then he was welcome to start his own revolutionary movement. Which is not to say that he did not accept advice and criticism, in fact he greatly respected his able top subordinates, particularly Chou En Lai and Chu Deh (his military commander). But when a final decision had to be made, Mao made it. There would be no more compromise solutions.



THE LEADERSHIP PRINCIPLE

Many people in our Movement like to think of Adolph Hitler as a man of such charisma that he led the National Socialist German Workers Party (NSDAP) virtually without resistance from within. Nothing could be further from the truth. Committee rule reigned in the NSDAP until Hitler so thoroughly eclipsed his fellow "leaders" in terms of performance that he was able to establish "the leadership principle", i.e. one man rule. Yet internal resistance did not end. In 1921 his opponents in the party circulated a leaflet claiming that Hitler was both a Jew and a government agent. Apparently his "hypnotic powers" did not work on everybody.

After the failed Beer Hall Putsch of 1923 Hitler spent six months in prison, but upon his release he was able to reorganize the Party, and it expanded into north Germany where it came to be led by Gregor and Otto Strasser. These two brothers, along with the leader of the S.A., Ernst Roehm, were pushing a very radical form of National Socialism which would give workers the ownership of industry and would give the S.A. control of the Army. The Strasser brothers were joined by an extraordinary young propagandist named Josef Goebbels.

Hitler recognized the power of the combination that was now forming against him. He wooed Goebbels away from Gregor Strasser and forced Otto Strasser out of the Party. But the threat of a "Brown Revolution" against Hitler ended only in 1934 on the Night of the Long Knives when Gregor Strasser and Ernst Roehm were killed by the S.S.

Where the Power of Plutocracy Lies

By Jeremiah Standridge

The current plague of crises in the U.S. is not the result of the faults or failings of the ordinary American. These enormous problems, which increase in scope and intensity by the day, are criminal acts of commission and omission against the American people by the plutocratic elite. Indeed, we can lay the blame for our decaying social order at the doorstep of the System that claims to rule for the benefit of all. Why do White plutocrats do things that obviously undermine the health of our race and nation? Because they will do anything to serve their own purposes regardless of whom it destroys - such is the nature of our enemy.

THE GOALS OF THE PLUTOCRATS

The leaders of the present System are motivated primarily by greed. Profit comes before people. The plutocrats, internationalists, communists and Jews all have one aim in common: to blend all of the peoples and nations of the world into one passive, unthinking, brown mass. They want an unlimited pool of "worker ants" to swarm to their sweatshops day after day to slave away and produce for them colossal profits.

Why do they want to destroy the nationalities and races? Because they must eliminate any and all allegiances to anything other than themselves. A unified, homogenous and culturally united people will not take the exploitation of a patrician-based plutocracy for long. In revolution after revolution down through history healthy peoples have risen up to overthrow and destroy oppressive elites. Unfortunately, the wealthy are almost always able to worm their way back into power after stability has been restored by taking advantage of the inherent power of money. After so many revolts against their power, they have learned the lessons of control all too well.

SUBDUING THE NATIONAL WILL

The techniques of control vary widely - from television manipulation to "fair" housing laws, from affirmative action programs to outright illegal actions against racialist leaders by the FBI and others. The TV is used with brutal efficiency to advance their evil policies and pacify the people.

To those of us who know the truth about the Plutocracy it is immmensely frustrating to combat such power. But fight we must! They have warped the minds of our people and have produced an indifferent and apathetic species of laborers devoid of any concern for the fate of our Race. They have used their immense wealth to corrupt the easily corruptible political leadership - they are as puppeteers to puppets. The Plutocratic Goliath appears formidable, but we know what others do not - its time is running short. The hour of decision draws ever nearer.

THE PIGS RULE THE FARM

The people are not nearly as blind as the patricians like to believe. They see the decadence all around them. They will identify with our Movement because we are not of the cosmopolitan, charity-minded rich. We are the people. The wealthy can never lead the National Revolutionary Movement because they do not dress like us, or work with their hands or take orders from fellow workers. Their pandering and condescending charity work just epitomizes their hypocrisy. The people see through their pretensions.

In George Orwell's Animal Farm the animals of the farm were ruled by the Pigs. All decisions were made by a committee of Pigs. The Pigs directed all work but did none themselves. Sound familiar? Suit-and-tie politicians, executives and managers rule the roost without ever rubbing elbows with the ordinary people who they do not understand, but whose loyalty they demand. This contradiction will come to undo the System of the "Pigs".

Is it an accident that Bush, Bentsen, Quayle and Dukakis are all millionaires? They like to tell us that "the Duke" lives "frugally", but a Pig is a Pig and it identifies and associates with its own kind. The people know that if the Jackass Pigs replace the Grand Old Pigs that nothing really changes, and that is why they don't vote. Why bother? It is just a well-organized swindle.

Sooner than the plutocrats think, the people will begin to realize that they have nothing to lose but a bad end. The disease of apathy and ignorance will vanish quickly when the System, through its own greed and incompetence, can no longer provide the necessary bread and circuses - and we will be there to fill the void with national spirit and revolutionary zeal. Until the storming of the barricades, comrades, have faith in the System's self-destruction and prepare to implement our victory! JS

History

From the early days of the Party Hitler was under pressure from Nazi members and leaders to merge or ally with other voelkish (racialist) parties. On particular events Hitler would sometimes cooperate with the conservative voelkish parties, such as Alfred Hugenberg's German National Party, but he consistently refused merger or alliance as these would weaken his authority and deprive him of the flexibility in manuever that a revolutionary needs to take power. Moreover, Hitler did not want to water down the message of National Socialism. He believed in what he was preaching.

Eventually, the vast majority of those who voted for the voelkish parties switched to the NSDAP. But the leadership of those parties would never voluntarily submit to Hitler's authority. For example, in the elections of September 1930, Hugenberg's party lost 2 million of its 4 million voters to Hitler. And mass defections continued until the the Nazis took power in 1933, yet Hugenberg acted as stumbling block to Hitler throughout the process. We can expect the same sort of behavior from racialist leaders in America.

THE PATH TO VICTORY

The circumstances of Lenin, Hitler and Mao were all very different from one another, but certain principles can be drawn from these three revolutionary experiences. It is plain that strong revolutionary leaders cannot cooperate as equal partners. There must be a clear line of authority - a pecking order if you like - with only one man at the top. Talented subordinates must be given their heads, but they cannot be allowed to rule the roost, either as individuals or in tandem. A revolutionary party must be capable of rapid and decisive action and only one man rule can ensure this.

The ideology of a successful revolutionary party must be clear and coherent. Various ideological tendencies can be synthesized, but the key word here is synthesis as opposed to compromise. Lenin, Hitler and Mao all believed absolutely in the truth of what they were preaching. They had no doubts, despite crushing setbacks (the Bolshevik failure in 1905, the Beer Hall fiasco, and the destruction of the Red Army in 1935), and their faith in their ideas and their undaunted determination to prevail inspired their followers to heroic action. No mish-mash of ideas or collection of weak-kneed compromises can cause men to sacrifice all for the Movement.

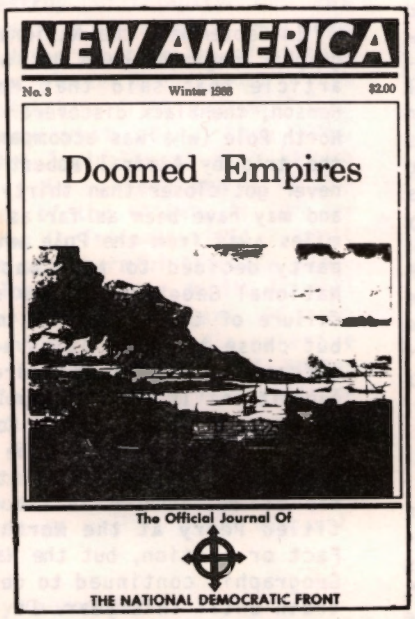
In America, one party will prove through its performance that it is destined to lead our race and nation to salvation. If history is any guide, the leaders of the other racialist organizations will do all in their power to prevent the rise of the Party of Destiny, but most of their members will eventually defect to it any way. It is up to us to prove that the NDF is that party. We do not need or want people who doubt. Only absolute commitment will bring victory, and that is what we demand of our cadre. GG

NEW AMERICA – The Radical Voice of American Nationalism



New America is the ideological and historical journal of the National Democratic Front. It exposes the half-truths, historical lies and hypocrisies upon which the present plutocratic System is based, and it reveals and explains the eternal principles of nationalism that guide the NDF. Our wisdom is drawn from an historical analysis that follows truth wherever it may lead. History is the foundation of political wisdom and is the training ground of the true political leader. That is why we lead New America No.3 with the editorial entitled "Masters of History" and follow with these articles:

SHORT BURSTS

JDO Announces Paramilitary Training

According to the Los Angeles Herald Examiner (8/2/88), Mordechai Levy, the head of the Jewish Defense Organization [a subsidiary of the JDL], announced to the press that he was establishing paramilitary training camps in New York and California. The one in New York already has 75 trainees according to Levy. Glenn Miller's White Patriot Party was smashed by the Federal government for engaging in paramilitary training. We're waiting.

In another development in Los Angeles, a real estate developer was arrested on August 13th and charged with hiring Robert and Ida Manning to kill a business rival. The letter bomb sent by the Mannings killed a secretary. The Mannings are members of the JDL and are now safely in the bosom of Israel. To date Israel has never extradicted a JDL member for trial in the U.S. This is hardly surprising when one remembers that the Talmud does not consider the killing of a Gentile a crime.

U.S. Blows It in Basketball

The Black coach of the U.S. Olympic basketball team, John Thompson, planned 1988 to be a celebration of Black basketball. He astonishingly assembled an all-Black squad with only one token White (an unknown named Dan Maerle) yet the press pretended not to notice. Thompson knew he could get away with this without being criticized for being a Black racist because of the hypocrisy that reigns in the American media.

Unfortunately for Thompson and Negro basketball, the Soviets fielded an all-White team that could not jump, run fast or move quickly with feet or hands. All they could do was play basketball better than Thompson's Blacks, beating them soundly in the semi-finals. The Soviets played the sort of basketball not seen in this country since the 1950's - White basketball. It centered on crisp passing and movement off the ball, rather than on one-on-one moves, the kind of basketball epitomized by the play of Larry Bird and Bill Walton rather than that of Michael Jordan and Julius Irving which is now, sadly, the norm in the NBA.

Al McGuirre, the NBC analyst, commented that only one of the Soviet players could start for an NBA team. That is probably true because what makes White basketball great is not its individual talent but its intelligent, disciplined teamwork on both offense and defense. McGuirre also said the problem is not that American basketball is getting worse, but that European basketball is getting better. This is quite right and is occurring despite the fact that basketball is still not very popular or widely played in Europe. In our daydreams, we see the next U.S. Olympic coach selecting an all-White team (we will accept a token Black) and playing basketball as a White nation should play it - all the way to the gold.

Soft Money Corruption

The Democratic and Republican parties have avoided the sham limits on campaign contributions through the use of "soft money". These are contributions to the national and state parties to be used for "party building" activities. They cannot be used directly for anyone's campaign. There is no limit on soft money contributions. So far this year 119 patriots have donated over $100,000 each to the Democratic Party, and 150 patriots have donated over $100,000 each to the Republican Party. It is wonderful to see such altruism in this day and age.

More Justice - American Style

On September 15th, Judith Anne Wrappe was murdered by a drug addict named Frank De Chirico in New York City. She was an art student at the Pratt Institute. He was a killer on parole who wanted the what was in her purse - $27.00 as it turned out. She died bravely refusing to give the criminal her property. So rare to hear of anyone dying in honor these days. De Chirico had been arrested nine times since 1966. He served thirteen years for a 1973 manslaughter and was then put on parole. The satanic circus called American justice goes 'round and 'round and only revolution can stop the door from revolving.

Geographic Declares Henson a Fraud

In September, the National Geographic magazine came out with an article that said that Matthew Henson, the Black discoverer of the North Pole (who was accompanied on the trip by Admiral Robert Peary) never got closer than thirty miles and may have been as far as eighty miles away from the Pole when the party decided to turn back. The National Geographic knew of the failure of the expedition in 1909, but chose to treat it as a great success as it had sponsored the expedition. It used its political power to squelch a 1910-11 Congressional investigation of the fraud. Dennis Rawlins exposed all this in his all-but-ignored 1973 book entitled Peary at the North Pole: Fact or Fiction, but the National Geographic continued to deny the truth until this year. It is not clear what motivated the organization to finally come clean.

LETTERS

Dear Sir:

I have been taking Ben Klassen's paper for some time - maybe two to three years I guess. I would like to know more about your movement. I don't understand how Klassen's plan will work. I know you can't get 10 million copies of his book read by the general public. The public just will not warm up and read a big book - I have tried this by giving away books in the past. Meet one you gave a book to six months later and "We ain't had time to read it."

Yours truly,
E. Strobel
Brownwood, Texas

Dear Editor:

I belong to no organized religion. I am a deist not an atheist. I doubt if a pure atheist exists. They all operate on some kind of faith. Well, Ben Klassen thinks he can destroy Christianity. The Jews will applaud his efforts. They seem to be doing a better job of it than Klassen. Klassen spends most of his time attacking "right-wingers" (and we know what color they are.) Thinking logically, I must assume Klassen is cooperating with the enemies of the Whites. As for destroying Christianity (and I admit it has some harmful effects), Klassen alone can never do it. It will take a few hundred years, if ever. Meanwhile, it acts as a cohesive force keeping millions of Whites together. As for "mud races withering on the vine" - they have survived 50,000 years in harsh primitive conditions - they are on every continent - they breed faster than insects. Be realistic Mr. Klassen!

Signed
Cranky Caucasion
Wallkill, New York

Dear Comrade Gallo and Friends,

I wish to accept your invitation to respond to the article outlining the debate between the NDF and Ben Klassen's Church of the Creator. Rational, nonemotional debates such as this are desirable among our parties, and the various beliefs and programs should periodically be subjected to dispassionate scrutiny if they are to remain viable and responsive to change. The discussion in Number 33 of The Nationalist raised significant points, and the stances of both the Church of the Creator and the NDF have their strengths and weaknesses.

Mr. Gallo is correct in pointing out that Jews are not the primary cause of decline of the Western powers, indeed increased power and influence of racial, ethnic, economic or political minorities is a reliable symptom of malaise among the majority, but rarely is the cause of collapse. Klassen unfortunately overemphasizes the effect of non-Whites on the present state of affairs, and the Chrurch's philosophy is negative, focusing on more what it opposes rather than what it advocates. Focusing on hatred of non-Whites plays directly into the hands of our enemies, who frantically attempt (and usually succeed) to portray us as haters to the White masses. In order to win influence and thus power, we must appeal to a broad spectrum of Whites. We will never accomplish this by negativism.

In turn, Klassen raises significant points regarding the plan of the NDF (and others) to divide the U.S. along racial lines through voluntary transfers of population. It is indeed questionable, at least under the present materialistic Weltanschaung that people have, whether millions of Whites would be willing to give up their homes and businesses to relocate. Two conditions must be met in order for this to happen: 1) the alternative to relocating must be suitably horrible to be put out of the question, say routine murder and plunder on the part of rioting non-Whites, and 2) there must be suitable incentives (financial, lifestyle, security, etc.) for people to uproot. Undoubtedly, these conditions would have to come about after a period of catastrophic upheavel, so that Whites and non-Whites would have little else to lose and much to gain by relocation. That this would be bloodless is highly unlikely....

David C. Canaday
Kansas City, Kansas

Editor- The NDF has never advocated "voluntary transfers of population." We seek to come to power through the political process and then laws will be passed ordering relocation of coloreds into their own nations. These laws will be enforced like any other laws, i.e. with the threat of force backed by the use of real force when necessary. The only voluntary aspect of this arrangement is that Whites living in the colored nations will have the choice to relocate to the White nation or stay put and place themselves at the mercy of the coloreds. These resettlements will be handled as humanely as possible, but they will be forced, not voluntary.

After the Second World War, the Soviets relocated millions of people in eastern Europe with very little resistance. This was despite the fact that these resettlements were extremely brutal in nature with hundreds of thousands dying of starvation and exposure on the roads. During the war, the Nazis relocated millions of Jews and non-Jews to eastern Europe. Only two major revolts (Warsaw and Treblinka) against the Germans are recorded and neither took place as an effort to resist resettlement. The vast majority accepted their fate without resistance even though they were treated harshly and lost all their property in the process. We saw exactly the same thing in the U.S. when we threw the Japanese (60% of whom were citizens of the U.S.) into concentration camps during World War II. The treatment of the Japanese was far from humane yet they did not resist.

NDF At the Movies

By Brian Schlaupitz

In Martin Scorcese's Taxi Driver, Robert DeNiro plays an alienated ex-Marine and Vietnam War veteran whose insomnia drives him to a nighttime cabbie job. The view thus presented of the sleaze and scum of New York City combines with his terrible loneliness to drive him to the brink of madness - or is it just a natural, primeval sense of violent reaction to his surroundings? After being spurned by a beautiful campaign worker, he is foiled in an assassination attempt on her boss, the epitome of the System hack politician. He redirects his energies to shoot an armed robber and involve himself with a second love interest, a young prostitute. In a misguided effort to save her from the streets and return her to suburbia, he concludes the film with a tremendous spree of executions in which pimps, gangsters, and johns alike reap their just deserts. This film is critical to me because it so clearly and convincingly presents the decay of "our" civilization (especially in the cities) and the vigilante violence which is its logical by-product.

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE HILL

CROSS OF IRON is a film in which Sam Peckinpah somehow got away with presenting the Germans as the "good guys", or at least viewed them objectively. The plot revolves around the power struggle between the real soldiers and a careerist Wehrmacht officer whose main preoccupation is winning the Iron Cross during the brave Euorpean assault on Bolshevism. The shattering conclusion illustrates brilliantly my World War II-veteran grandfather's assertion that there are no good guys or bad guys in war, just those lucky enough to survive.

LITTLE KNOWN FILMS

SLEEPING DOGS is an obscure film made and set in the incredibly beautiful little nation of New Zealand. Aussie actor Sam Neil portrays a harmless Everyman character named Smith who flees city life and a broken marriage to begin a Thoreau-like existence in the wild. Unbeknownst to him, his island home doubles as a cache for terrorist weapons, and he is arrested upon their discovery in the wake of an eruption of revolutionary violence (by what are characterized, without elaboration, as "anarchists" and "radical right-wingers") which brings martial law and a Yankee military occupation to New Zealand. Faced with possible execution, Smith escapes and becomes the proverbial Public Enemy #1. Wanted as a revolutionary leader, he makes a classic defiant last stand. This film - while lacking in overall political clarity - amply demonstrates that no one can remain neutral in the kind of circumstances depicted.

Shocking Asia and Mondo Magic are documentaries in the Mondo Cane genre which every multiracialist should have to watch. The Third World rituals presented range from the entertainingly exotic and bizarre to the fearfully repellant and brutal - and anyone with the stomach to watch will get a good idea of the unfathomable cultural differences between "us" and "them".
